Young children and families are experiencing unprecedented challenges and disruptions to their lives with children at great risk of not reaching their full potential. Around the world, parents and primary caregivers are struggling to navigate this new reality. Now, more than ever, parents and caregivers have a pivotal role to play at the front lines of protecting their children from stress and promoting their development, health, and well-being. This crisis has brought to the forefront the critical role of parenting.

Objective of the Donor Convening

The LEGO Foundation, Oak Foundation, the Global Partnership to End Violence Against Children (End Violence), the Early Childhood Development Action Network (ECDAN), UNICEF and the World Health Organization (WHO) invite you to a Donor Convening to discuss the critical importance of parenting and identify ways to collectively and strategically expand resources for parenting support globally. During this meeting, we will:

- Discuss the critical role of parenting in the times of COVID-19
- Provide a brief overview of evidence on parenting support interventions and how they can achieve multiple outcomes across the sustainable development goals
- Discuss a proposed framework for collective action to achieve scale, accelerate innovation, and build evidence

Registration
